FOREWORD

When the Bloomfield Theological Seminary was organized, the Germans were the only immigrants of foreign speech who were here in sufficient numbers and were sufficiently concentrated to make it feasible to provide them with separate churches and bilingual ministers. The task of educating a bilingual ministry therefore was limited to teaching in one foreign language. Under the changed conditions of the present day we are finding it necessary to teach in five foreign languages.

Under the old conditions it was thought desirable to give each student a complete theological education in a foreign language. To-day, on account of the number of races to be taught, this is no longer possible, and no longer desirable.

A system is now followed whereby our students will become so intimately acquainted with the English language as to be able to read, write, and speak it fluently, and absorb through it the learning, the culture and the idealism of the native-born Christian American. The system, in the second place, will so thoroughly train the student in his native language that he will be able to use it as a perfect instrument of communication between himself and his people. He will thus become an American Christian foreign missionary, fitted to evangelize the men of his own race living in America.

The need of bringing home the message of the gospel to the masses in the United States understanding only a foreign tongue, is the sole but sufficient reason for the existence of the Bloomfield Theological Seminary. There is nothing that will make this country of ours safe, either with or without democracy, except the spirit of Christ dwelling within the individual inhabiting it.
